[DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

EASTERN DATES TO AUGUST 30.

NEWS FROM ENGLISH SOURCES.

Prussians turn away from Paris and make a Flank Movement on McMahon.

LIVERPOOL, August 29.—A cable special to the Sun, dated Arlon, August 29, via Brussels, says the Prussians are making a flank movement on McMahon, the same as they did on Bazaine. McMahon already occupies a line from Rethel to Stenay, leaning on Mezieres, Sedan and Montmedy, with the Belgian boundary behind. The Prussians who were marching on Paris, deployed from Stenay to Troyes, have changed their direction, and instead of going west they are going north. Their troops around Troyes march in the direction of Romilly; those around Chalons in that of Suippes, and those which were between Stenay and Varennes in the direction of Rethel by Grandpre and Vouziers, while a strong force is at Dun observing the left of McMahon at Stenay. Meanwhile strong Prussian columns are advancing from Luneville and Joinville to St. Dizier, where the headquarters of the King were reported to be yesterday. It is the manifest intention of the Prussians to destroy McMahon as they destroyed Bazaine, and then turn their attention to Paris. A great battle will be fought before many days between Rethel and Montmedy. Do not believe in the dispatch from Rethel this morning, stating that McMahon and Bazaine are in communication.

Details of Army Movements.

LONDON, August 29.—Advices from the scene of war report the Emperor's headquarters at Vousiers. It is thought that the Crown Prince is moving north and will encounter McMahon west of Reims and Epernay.

It is said the French advance repulsed the Prussians at Attigny, a few miles northwest of Vouziers. McMahon is reported in Ardennes Forest and Bazaine between Metz, Conflans and Etaine.

A later dispatch states that Steinmetz marched northward from Metz, pursuing McMahon to prevent him from disturbing the Prussian forces investing Metz.

Several German merchant vessels have taken refuge in Yarmouth harbor, and are blockaded by a French iron-clad in the offing.

The Tribune's correspondent says the people do not suffer the horrors of war. Women and shopkeepers in villages are not molested by soldiers. It is essentially a civilized war. The rear will be left for militia and the active German army will be able to blockade and capture Paris.

NEWS FROM FRENCH SOURCES.

PARIS, August 29.—Official dispatches state that the Prussian army continues its movement on Rethel and Mezieres.

The Presse has a story that Col. Galifilt on a reconnoissance surprised one hundred and fifty Uhlans and captured all. It is reported he will be made a General for his brilliant services.

General Failly is deprived of his command for leaving cannon at Chalons to fall into the hands of Prussians.

LONDON, August 29.—A dispatch from St. Menehould says 800 of the Garde Mobile and a quantity of booty were captured here by Prussians.

A dispatch from Paris says upwards of 100,000 Prussians are between Epernay and Reims. 12,000 Prussians occupy the heights near Reims. Preparations to intercept the Prussian advance are made within a circuit of 40 leagues of Paris.

Tremendous Battle in Progress.

PARIS, August 29.—It is reported here to night that a tremendous battle has been going on all day, and according to all accounts McMahon must have reached the troops of Prince Frederick Charles to-day.

NEWS FROM PRUSSIAN SOURCES.

LONDON, August 29, P. M.—A dispatch dated Headquarters of the King of Prussia, Sunday evening, says: Yesterday there was an action between the 3d regiment of Saxony Horse, supported by a squadron of the 18th Hussars and six squadrons of French Chasseurs, near Sommeus. Our troops were victorious. The French commander was wounded and taken prisoner.

LONDON, August 29.—A rumor comes from Bas le Duo, from a Prussian source, that Napoleon is shut up in Metz. In absence of positive knowledge of the Emperor's whereabouts, the statement is believed by Germans.

Disturbances in Spain.

MADRID, August 27, via Paris, Aug. 28.—It is reported that a band of Carlists, who made their appearance in Navara, were defeated and dispersed to-day by the national troops. Another band appeared in the Province of Guipuscoa and troops are in hot pursuit. The Basque Provinces are declared in a state of siege.

PARIS, August 29.—The Carlists are swarming in the northern provinces of Spain. Reports from the frontier anticipate the approach of formidable disturbances in Spain.

A fight occurred at Lisbon between French and German citizens, during which many were killed.

WAR MISCELLANY.

The war in France has served to excite the Spanish Republicans to activity, and their demonstrations against a Monarchy and in favor of a Republic, have been enthusiastic and impressive. The humor may yet extend to France. And it ought to go to Germany too.

The Orleanist Princes, with a vigilant eye to the main chance, are seeking service in the French army. They may again come into power in France, but a dynasty brought in by defeat and disaster, at the hands of a foreign enemy, will have no enviable time. The throne thus gained would prove unstable.

To increase the naval forces of the country during the war, the King of Prussia offers to charter and arm at his expense any number of ships that will take part in the pending hostilities. The crews will wear the uniform of the Federal Navy, and be treated in every respect on an equal footing. If a ship thus chartered be injured or destroyed, she will be paid for by the government; if, on the other hand, she should capture and destroy a hostile vessel, she will receive a premium of 50,000 thalers for an iron cased frigate, 30,000 thalers for an iron cased corvette or ram, 20,000 thalers for an iron battery, 15,000 thalers for a screw vessel, and 10,000 thalers for a screw of smaller dimensions.

The French contend that the action of their Government in expelling Germans from Paris is perfectly justifiable; that in Paris there are over 30,000 North Germans banded together as trade unions and other associations, and these are known to be the leaders of the revolutionary demonstrations in Paris, and that it is well known to the French Government that these men have money distributed among them to sustain and urge them to excite revolution; and, also, that when they are to be drafted or enrolled in the French service, they at once claim exemption on the ground that they are subjects of North Germany, although many of them have been residing in France since their boyhood, and receiving all the benefits of her protection, &c. They claim that the order expelling all such from the French territory is justifiable, and according to all usages of warfare.

A Berlin letter says of the Prussian Chief of Staff Gen. Count Moltke has become more taciturn than ever, and this is so well known that scarcely anybody ever speaks to him, but every body waits until he speaks. People here are so accustomed to his peculiarities and solitary habits, evidently the result of his constantly pondering over his duties, that they even forget not to see him when he passes. Yet he can express himself very fluently and very clearly on occasions, as I myself can testify, having heard him once explain the topography of the seat of the Danish war. Some few days ago the taciturn Moltke was broken by an individual who claims to be one of the Bourse. "Well," he said, on meeting the General on the street, "how are things getting on, General?" "Thank you, sir," replied the General, "my rye crops are getting on beautifully, but my potatoes are very backward." The Bourse gentleman disappeared.

LAST NIGHT'S DISPATCHES.

[SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

NEWS FROM FRENCH SOURCES.

Movements of the Contending Armies.

LONDON, August 30, 1:30 P. M.—The following from the French War Office is just received. Nearly 900,000 men are in the triangle formed by lines running from Reims. Bazaine is not shut up. He has 120,000 men and McMahon is 150,000 strong. They are stealing two marches on the Prince Royal, who is two days ahead of Frederick Charles. It is hoped the latter cannot come up in time.

Fifty thousand men left Paris Monday for the vicinity of Rethel. It is said the Prussian force there is 600,000 strong.

Belgian Troops Concentrating to Protect the Frontier.

BRUSSELS, August 30.—Belgian troops are hastening to the front from all quarters. A great battle between the French and Prussians is apparently imminent, and the services of the Belgian troops will, no doubt, be necessary to protect the country from invasion.

Movements of McMahon.

LONDON, August 30.—McMahon failed to form a junction with Bazaine, and now finds himself separated by a wedge of two powerful Prussian armies.

The 27th French regiment routed two regiments of Saxon dragoons with great loss, near Stenay. The Saxons, however, now hold Stenay and Mousson.

The Prince Imperial having arrived at Sedan Sunday, it is still believed that McMahon will persevere in his attempt to reach Metz and Bazaine.

The Attitude of Russia.

NEW YORK, August 30.—The World's special telegraphs a repetition of warning already several times given of the imminent peril of Russian intervention at no distant time in this war. St. Petersburg papers of the 23d formally deny that the Czar has in any way recognized the conduct of Prussia, and adds that Russia reserves to herself most absolute freedom to act as her position requires in the interest of European equilibrium and her own destiny.

The Slavonic journals in Austria openly denounce the progress of the Teutonic race in Central Europe, and calls upon Russia to make the Austrian government understand its mission.

The Belgian Army Placed on a War Footing.

The approach of the hostile armies to the Belgian frontier, excites great apprehension in that country. The Belgian army has been put on a war footing by a strong vote and ordered to the front. The arming of the Garde Civile goes on rapidly.

Two special messengers of the Queen's reached London with dispatches for the Foreign office, from Brussels.

Le Monte, Louvan, and Antwerp are fully armed.

It is reported that a column of 25,000 Prussian cavalry and artillery were yesterday marching on Epernay.

French Ministry "Packed Up" to Leave Paris.

The Courrier's special this morning is very brief and merely says the Ministry have packed up and are on the eve of departure for Tours.

The Next Great Battle.

LONDON, August 30.—The French say that the district between Reims, Mezieres, Sedan and Montmedy is to be the scene of the next general action.

McMahon's extraordinary move may have delayed the Crown Prince's move on Paris, but it has also made that advance at any time hereafter easy.

London papers are perfectly befogged as to positions of hostile armies, as late war telegrams have made confusion more confounded.

BRUSSELS, August 30.—The investment of Lounguan by the Prussians, reported yesterday, is denied.

McMahon's headquarters are at Sedan.

Prussians Capture Vouziers—King William's Route to Paris.

The Prussians entered Vouziers on the heels of the retreating French.

King William's route to Paris will be by the Upper Marne and Meuse.

French Cavalry Capture Five German Detachments.

LONDON, August 30.—The Times says. On the 27th inst. five German detachments were captured by French cavalry near Bazany, in the Department of Ardennes. The Germans belonged to the fourth army corps, which is now scouring the eastern departments in order to prevent communication between McMahon and Bazaine.

Siege of Strasbourg—Bombardment of the City.

CARLSRUHE, August 30.—The Gazette of this city has the following from Strasbourg: Last evening the Bishop of this city, actuated by a desire to stop the effusion of blood, undertook to bring about some sort of truce or mediation. With this view he went to Lingolsheim and had an interview with Major Liezinsky, chief of the Prussian staff. He urged that the bombardment was contrary to the laws of modern warfare. The inhabitants had been denied leave to withdraw from the city. The Bishop obtained twenty-four hours cessation of the bombardment in order to give the Governor time to negotiate. The Governor was invited to come out and examine the preparations which had been made by the Prussians for continuing the siege. As Major Liezinsky escorted the Bishop back to Strasbourg his flag of truce was riddled with bullets.

The bombardment continues with guns of the largest calibre, and the surrender of the city is merely a matter of time.

THE TERRITORIES.

From the Olympia Tribune: "Gen. T. I. McKenny writes that he has been reinstated in the office of Indian Superintendent of Washington Territory, and that the present military agents will all be superseded soon. We further learn that the General is about to depart from the East on his return to this coast, to resume the duties from which he was suspended. The steamer Chehalis, Capt. Hyde, has been put on the Olympia and Seattle route, and will hereafter make weekly trips."

Following is an authentic account of the recent battle between the Sioux and Crows, on the Yellowstone, a short time ago: The Sioux, in overwhelming force, attacked the Crow camp early in the morning, but the latter, being on the alert, had their squaws back in the hills out of danger, and repulsed the Sioux, putting them to flight; then, while the Crows were preparing for pursuit, the Sioux rallied and attacked their squaws, two of whom were taken captive, and are reported to have been murdered three nights later, at a war dance; the Crows then started in pursuit of the Sioux, who incontinently fled, and followed them fifty miles; in this running fight the Crows killed twelve Sioux and captured two prisoners, their own loss being seven killed and one, a white man, wounded. The Crows also captured 150 head of horses and 40 head of mules, many of both being shod all around and bearing the United States brand. Some of the horses are full blooded American stock.

Says the Montana Pick and Plow: Yellowstone hunters say the buffalo herds to the east of us are rapidly decreasing in extent. This is mainly due to the fact that the skin of the female is alone valuable for robes. The skin of the male, over three years old, is never used for robes, the hair on the hind quarters being not longer than that on a horse, while on the fore quarters it has a length of from four to six inches. The skin is also too thick and heavy to be used for anything but lodge coverings, while the flesh is coarse and unpalatable, and is never used for food when any other can be had. The females, therefore, are always singled out by the hunters, and consequently the males now exceed the females in the proportion of ten to one. Another, but less important, cause of decrease, is the immense droves of wolves in the Yellowstone valley, which destroy the young. Two more decades will probably witness the entire extinction of this noble animal—its disappearance at least from United States territory. But owing to the insusceptibility of its grazing ground to civilized settlement, the bison of the far north will probably never be crowded from existence.

THE NEHALEM VALLEY.

SITUATION, LANDS, RESOURCES, AND GENERAL FEATURES.

NE-HA-LEM VALLEY, Aug. 28, '70.

EDITOR OREGONIAN.

It may be that many of your readers do not know where the Ne-ha-lem valley is, or anything whatever concerning it. Supposing such to be the fact, I am induced to write you this letter. Situated among the coast range of mountains, some twenty miles west of the Tualatin Plains, and about forty miles from Portland, commences the valley of that name, running a westerly course for about seventy miles in length, by one-half to five miles in width. It is watered by the Ne-ha-lem river, which courses the entire length of the valley, running nearly parallel with the Columbia river, and emptying into the Pacific ocean about forty miles below or south of the mouth of the Columbia, and eight miles above Tillamook bay.

This Valley is but very little known, even to old Oregonians, and is now a wild, unclaimed forest, covered lightly with ash, maple, cottonwood, etc., and with an undergrowth such as hazel, vine maple, chittem wood, or bear brush on the higher bottoms, and the salmon bush, grass and such like on the lower bottoms. Here are about 135,000 acres of land, most of which, for richness and durability of soil, cannot be surpassed by any section on the Pacific coast, even the well known Wallamet valley, not excepted.

This soil with a favorable climate, is richly adapted to the production of the staple cereals as well as all kinds of vegetables and fruits produced north of the tropics. The soil of the higher bottoms is black, sandy, deep loam; while that on the lower bottoms is "made soil," like the lands immediately upon the banks of the Wallamet and Yamhill rivers. The latter is more particularly adapted to the growth of corn and garden vegetables, while the former is more especially fitted for the production of wheat, oats, timothy and grapes of all kinds, such as are liable to grow up tall and lodge on the low bottoms. From personal observations, I am prepared to say this soil will produce five tons of hay to the acre, and such is no uncommon result here. Fruit will doubtless arrive at excellent maturity here, but my own being yet young, and the only effort at an orchard in the valley, or at least in this part of the valley, I can only judge from the healthy and thrifty growth it now presents. "Oregon apples," however, are far-famed, and I entertain no fears that the Ne-ha-lem country will in the least impair their merited reputation. One cannot expect to come to this place and at once enter upon the pursuits of agriculture, but like the early days of our pioneer ancestry who ventured into the tangled wilds of Kentucky and Indiana, and had to "grub" the ground for their cabin sites and garden spot, the immigrant will have to employ his ax and fire-brand, slashing down and burning the brush and timber and clearing off the superfluous undergrowth. I have met with no difficulty in my "clearing" experience here, and a little time and labor will soon produce the happy result of metamorphosing the "tangled wild wood" into a rich and promising farm. The river finds its source in the innumerable little rivulets springing from the sides of the adjacent mountains, and, upon an average, is about 100 feet wide from bank to bank. It is of the best pure, cold, soft water, and, as well as many of its larger tributaries, it is alive with fish, such as mountain and salmon trout. In places this river comes as near as eight miles to the Columbia river and then recedes again southerly, increasing the distance between the two to about 25 or 35 miles. The hillsides presents a heavy growth of timber, such as cedar, white, red and yellow fir, in inexhaustible quantities, while the best of mill-sites can easily be found. The river can be made the means of transportation of lumber the entire length of the valley. Game abounds in the valley and through all the hills. There are elk, deer, bear, etc., in plenty; while smaller game, such as grouse, pheasants, quail, etc., swarm in the bushes and flutter in the trees. For those who are fond of shooting, I would consider this country has a special inducement.

Two beds of coal, of a superior quality, have been discovered near the mouth of the river, and are thought to be extensive. This is also an inviting feature and will eventually add much to the wealth of the surrounding country.

To the immigrant I would say, if you want a home, where you can have one for the taking, and surround yourself with all the comforts and luxuries appurtenant thereto, without the great expense of a purchase, come to the Ne-ha-lem valley. I had almost forgotten to represent the two cardinal inducements to you. The first is that of the Portland and Astoria Railroad, the bill for which has now become a law, and down this river is the only practicable route, which has already been viewed out and reported as very favorable. The time for its completion is limited to six years, but the spirit of enterprise and energy, now indicated by its projectors, tell plainly that before four years shall have come and gone, the whistle of the "iron messenger" will reverberate along the windings of our now wild home. The second is favorable seasons, which the oldest inhabitant never knew to fail. The fact is, our only complaint exists in the excess of rain falls. That, however, is a good fault; and knowing it before hand, one can take advantage and profit by every shower. Snow falls upon the hills surrounding us, and, occasionally in the valley, but it disappears quickly and seldom interferes with the feed.

At this point, I am distant about 18 miles from the Columbia river opposite Oak Point, a steamer landing, where we can take passage and soon run the distance of 65 miles to Portland. From Astoria, it is here distant about 60 miles, and 30 miles above the lower settlement of about 40 settlers on this river.

Herein I have pretty fully represented to your readers the facts concerning this new, undeveloped, and I might say, almost unexplored portion of the country. If any of them who may be in quest of a home and are without means to purchase, should upon reading this letter, conclude to come and "tarry with us," my object will be accomplished. The land belongs to the Government and may be had for the taking.

Yours, N. E. HANSON.

CALIFORNIA AND NEVADA.

San Francisco is on the eve of another municipal election, and the papers are full of charges and counter charges of rascality and corruption.

The News presents a street scene in Gold Hill: Three boot-blacks sitting upon their professional stools in front of a fruit stand, devouring a third-class, pale fleshed watermelon, and three Piute squaws standing by, enviously watching the feast and waiting to polish off the rinds properly.

In Nevada the preachers of the Methodist Church are this year twenty-three, last year they numbered twenty six. The churches are seven instead of eight, the Sunday schools are fewer by three; but property in churches and parsonages has increased by $4,900, baptisms have doubled, and benevolent collections advanced by forty per cent.

The Grass Valley Union thus moralizes over the tendency of card players and Democrats to improve the English language. These pleasant afternoons card playing is indulged in at Grass Valley. The popular game here is called "pitch seven up." We saw a party playing the same game yesterday afternoon. They have a new lingo now when they play the game. We heard the words "no sky fungling," "connubiating" and "amalagoozle" frequently used during the progress of the game. It is clear that the speeches in the late Democratic Convention in San Francisco have given the English language new words. There is nothing like having a language enriched.

The Cincinnati Enquirer advises anybody in want of fun to go to the German gardens, about 11 o'clock at night, and shout "Vive la France."

WEDNESDAY MORNING AUGUST 31, 1870

A Democratic Eulogy on Congress

The [illegible] Democratic [illegible] to represent Congress as a disreputable body whose legislation [illegible] is purchased by corruptionists who [illegible] which they cannot [illegible] No Democratic editor [illegible] in his party has heretofore failed to stigmatize Congress in this way. [illegible] our very Democratic Congressman, Mr Joseph S Smith, with a statement of a very different kind! He wants it understood that he has not [illegible] of the [illegible] at Washington have been of far different description. Congress [illegible] ing to his statement [illegible] honorable and honest [illegible] legislating for the interests of the country. We find this revelation in a letter written by Mr Smith from Washington last July to Mr J. D. Fay of Jacksonville and published recently in the Jacksonville News. In this letter Mr Smith asserts that in Congress in all matters not political but of merely local interest it does not matter what a member's politics are or whether he has any political influence or not. All such questions are either considered on their merits, or in connection with other interests of a similar character and an industrious courteous and wide awake Democrat is just as likely to succeed as a Republican of the same capacity.

Mr Smith when he wrote this was evidently in an amiable and truth telling mood that is quite unusual to him. He pays a high compliment, indeed to the integrity and fairness of the gentlemen who compose the Congress of the United States three-fourths of whom are Republicans. To say that all questions that pertain to the general interests of the country are "considered on their merits" is to contradict the general assertion of the Democracy that Congress is controlled by rings and corruptionists who are the enemies and oppressors of the people.

But Mr. Smith had an object in making this gracious admission. Of course he had, for he never does anything of a political nature without an ulterior purpose. On this occasion his object was to gently intimate that a regard for the interests of Oregon does not require the election of a Republican Senator, and furthermore to hint that as he Joseph S. Smith, had done so much (according to his own story) in Congress he would be the very individual—that identical "industrious, courteous and wide-awake Democrat" whom he was describing—to send to the Senate. For had he not succeeded in passing through the House every measure relating to Oregon which the tried Senators by their combined efforts had passed through the body of which they are members? What Democrat, then, could so well answer Mr Smith's description and the requirements prescribed in Mr Smith's letter, as Mr Smith himself?

Our ingenious Congressman who manages to puff himself in this undisguised but delicate manner, has, so far failed, when boasting of his achievements in Congress to state that he never has succeeded in passing through the House a measure affecting the interests of Oregon till it had first passed the Senate and that on all important occasions the Senators after passing bills through the body in which they sit, have gone to the House and labored for their passage through that body. We can readily believe that the Congress, as Mr Smith intimates, is composed of men who are liberal in their views and who want to do the right thing yet we can hardly suppose that a Republican Congress, with all its virtues, would ignore all the bills offered by Republican members, to pass those championed by Mr. Smith, unless a greater influence than Mr. Smith's were brought to bear upon them. For we know that all other bills making grants for railroads of which a great number were offered, failed and that only two, both of which Oregon was interested in, succeeded. It appears, therefore, that notwithstanding all of Mr Smith's boasting it was the influence of our Senators and not his own efforts that accomplished these things for our State.

While we readily concede that our Republican Congress is disposed to 'consider questions on their merits,' we cannot agree with Mr. Smith that political influence in the Senator, or Representative is altogether useless in securing important results for his State. That is a flight of imagination that Smith indulges, and it is caused by his desire to be made a Senator himself. The people of Oregon will soon have an opportunity to test this matter and we advise the people of the southern counties in particular to get ready for the disappointment that is in store for them. They justly think that their railroad interests are at stake, and they may as well be prepared to give up their hopes of a railroad. They will understand this question of 'influence' in so far as it is connected with their railroad interests, as soon as Senator Williams gives place for a Democrat!

What is Democracy?

In the Democratic camp there is clearly trouble between those who are willing to accept the situation and bury dead issues and those who insist on making repudiation and opposition to the Fifteenth Amendment the chief planks in the platform. In Oregon the whole Democratic press agrees in the declaration of one of the party papers in an eastern county, that, 'politically the weak kneed go-between and compromise man is dead. He cannot come to the surface again—the Democracy will never suffer the nomination of another Horatio Seymour.' 'And the man or men,' says the same authority, 'who aspire to lead must not advocate a desertion of principles or that negro suffrage and military reconstruction and other leading radical measures are accomplished facts.' This undoubtedly is the position of a majority of the Democratic party. But on the other hand all the more able and intelligent journals of the party urge that the time has come to turn past issues and take a new position. They see plainly that so long as the party insists upon fighting on the ground where it has been so severely beaten it can never hope to recover power. But the old fogies whose only idea of Democracy is hatred of the nigger are so numerous in the party that they have to be consulted with. Accepting the situation, they consider giving over to the Radicals and they [illegible] ask what is the good of fighting, if they can no longer appeal to prejudice. Democracy [illegible] nothing more nor less than hatred to the "nigger" and since they are forbidden to pitch into Sambo they have nothing to say. The task of the more decent Democratic journals is a hard one. The New York World appeals to the South to leave political management for the present in the hands of the Northern wing of the party. It tells the South that the only hope of escaping from Radical rule is through Democratic victories at the North. From 1861 down to the present time it [illegible] many leading men in the South have voted [illegible] with political blindness. It was a supreme act of political folly to split the Charleston Convention by the lamentable schism which brought two Democratic candidates—Douglas and Breckinridge—into the field against Lincoln and [illegible] his first election. The Northern Democrats who [illegible] South [illegible] friends. Again it reminds them that the Southern [illegible] only the Northern Democrats [illegible] Northern Democrats may claim to understand the public sentiment of this section better than our impractical Southern brethren. Unless they will permit us to act upon our better knowledge, [illegible] they must resign themselves to the tender mercies of radical domination. And then it shows that further opposition to negro suffrage is useless. They are not oppressed by negro votes. Negro suffrage was brought about by the votes of white people. The reconstruction laws were passed by a Congress elected by white constituents. The advice is good but will it be taken? Similar appeals were made before the last Presidential campaign and were unheeded. That the Democratic party is seriously split on the question of whether to accept the situation or still fight a hopeless battle is apparent.

Progress of the War

The German forces have turned aside from the line of [illegible] toward Paris and taken a course toward the Belgian frontier evidently with the intention of meeting the French under McMahon and forcing a battle. The confidence with which they advance to meet the principal French army, with the evident determination to fight wherever they can find it is an almost sure indication of another victory. On the other hand, the French have been avoiding a battle, as if conscious of their inability to contend in the open field with the German forces. But the German troops are hunting another fight, and will be certain to compel the French to make it. In looking over the causes which have determined the superiority of the Germans thus far as a contemporary observes we can see none that will not be increased and intensified in every future phase of the campaign. If the personnel material, and organization of their armies were superior at first, still more must they excel now and hereafter. If they had strategists equal to the task of routing and demoralizing the French army in the flush of its hope and spirit, and when its Generals thought themselves prepared to invade Germany still more easy will it be for them to continue the rout of an army which has now been several times beaten and never successful. It would require a genius or a miracle to reorganize and restore the French army so as to bring it up to anything like the degree of efficiency it possessed at the battle of Weissenburg. The Germans meanwhile have been constantly improving. The new levies with which the gaps in the German regiments have been filled up are fully equal to the old material. The new French levies, however, are far inferior to that they replace. The contest must be fought out in the main by the armies assembled by the two powers at the commencement of the war. The Germans are superior in discipline intelligence, officers organization soldierly spirit and now it appears, in numbers. And these elements of superiority are constantly increasing. The sequel may prove this view to be a mistaken one but at present every probability is in its favor. The cause of France looks gloomy enough.

Several of our contemporaries are republishing from the New York Tribune a report that the President has decided to tender to Senator Williams the position of Solicitor General of the new Department of Justice, created by the last Congress. We may as well say that this is an office to which Senator Williams would not be eligible till after the expiration of his present term in the Senate inasmuch as it was created while he was a member of that body. We have no idea however, that he would leave the Senate to take that or any other position, even if he had it in his power to do so.

General Sherman will be in San Francisco some time between the 5th and 10th of September. He will be accompanied by his daughter. A telegram from Washington dated August 22d says that after visiting various places in California they will come to Portland go up the Columbia river to the head of navigation and thence across the country by stage until they strike the railroad by which they will return home.

OREGON

There will be a larger yield of grain in Union county than was at first anticipated. But the price of flour is lower than it was twelve months ago.

From the Jacksonville Sentinel: "The sale of government horses and mules came off last Saturday, at this place. Thirty six head were sold at prices ranging from $10 to $45 a head."

Mrs Abram Garrison, of Salem formerly of Yamhill county cooked breakfast on Monday for the family and soon after fell down dead. We have not learned the probable cause of her sudden decease.

There was to have been a horse race a few days ago at La Grande, but it "fizzled." The editor of the Democrat had built high hopes upon the anticipated event and says words cannot express his contempt for the manner in which the long looked for race terminated.

The Statesman learns that a project is on foot at Salem for the erection of a fine building by the benevolent societies of that place acting together. The Masons and Odd Fellows are discussing a plan to unite and organize a joint stock company for the purpose of putting up a large brick building to contain a number of rooms and offices for rent and two halls one for each society.

The officers of the Penitentiary, says the Statesman are busily engaged in taking a careful inventory of everything belonging to the State at that institution. It is found that the crops teams tools machinery etc with the household property amount in value to about $25 000 in addition to the real estate. This constitutes a first class outfit for carrying on the brickmaking and farming operations of the Prison grounds and in fact it is not only a model brickyard but a fair specimen of a farm.

Dr Marsh writes us from Forest Grove that Prof Collier, of Pacific University with four students, has started for Mount Hood for the purpose of making an ascent of that peak and taking observations as to its height geological features etc. He has taken with him all the necessary instruments. If his first measurements and observations should corroborate those of last year he will rest satisfied if they should show different results he will continue till he has perfectly established the fact of the actual hight of the king among our mountains. The instruments he has taken with him are as perfect as any and Prof Collier's attainments and skill are such as to lead us to expect interesting results.

The withdrawal of the British troops from Kingston Canada a few days ago, caused the discontinuance of the noon day gun, which has been fired every day since 1812.

THE PARK BLOCK QUESTION

ANOTHER CITIZEN PRESENTS HIS VIEWS

Editor Oregonian —In your paper for August 29th is a communication signed Wide Awake ' which treats of the action of the Common Council in refusing to consider a proposition from Russell & Ferry for the sale to the city of a certain Park Block now owned by private individuals As to the general tenor of the communication of ' Wide Awake I agree to it but his estimate of the value of the block offered for sale is much below reason and I ask space in your columns to show the correctness of my assertion

A block of land belonging to W T ... and situated beyond Twelfth street recently sold for six thousand three hundred dollars cash down The blocks situated between Seventh and Eighth streets are held at from fifteen to twenty thousand dollars and the owners are not anxious to sell at such rates believing that the increase of value will pay more than 12 per cent on the price asked

Taking the above facts as a basis for estimating the value of property in the same part of town what do we find?

The Park Blocks offered to the city by Russell & Ferry are 140 by 260 feet in size, being described by metes and bounds and running from the centre of the streets on which they are supposed to front. They are therefore fully as large as the adjoining blocks that are held as we have seen at from fifteen to twenty thousand dollars Now for example Block One is worth $20 000 and Block Three $13 000 by what rule is ' Wide Awake able to arrive at the conclusion that the Block between One and Three is only worth three thousand?

It seems to me that instead of six thousand, (the price asked the city) being exorbitant, it is so very reasonable that the Common Council should not hesitate for an instant to accept the proposition

The purchase of the Park Block would enhance the appearance of the city very greatly and the authorities should not let the present (the last) opportunity to gain a title to them pass

The owners of the Park Block mentioned desire that the city should own the Park but can not afford to allow so much value to remain unproductive much longer

If the city does not presently purchase the Park will be sold at auction or improved In either case it will be placed out of the power of the Council to purchase them except at the rates at which other property in the neighborhood is held

THE PARK QUESTION AGAIN

WIDE AWAKE WAKED UP

EDITOR OREGONIAN

Mr North Park ' while attempting to correct misstatements, not only fails, but on his own part actually commits the offence he would condemn in others Not one foot ' he says, ' of sidewalk has been laid at the expense of the city on Northeast or Northwest Park Streets but he should have added if he had not wished to deceive that at the city's expense the cross streets of the North Park have been sidewalked And Mr North Park maligns utterly without warrant the citizens of the Second and Third Wards by asserting that they call upon the city to improve the parks before they have shown enough public spirit to even lay a board on the streets to walk upon let alone petitioning the Common Council ' The Clerk of the Council will inform 'North Park upon application, that the majority of property holders on Alder street between Seventh and Eighth petitioned the Council more than one year ago for its improvement, and that a month's ago the Council gave notice of its proposal for said improvement and still the Council has not yet ordered it improved Are the Citizens to be blamed for the faults of the City Council? Are we to be taunted with not improving streets when as yet we have no legal street to improve? Are the citizens of the second ward to be ridiculed for the appearance of Park street when as yet they have no control over it? Let the Council do justice to the second ward by securing for it the control of Park Row and my word for it there is no citizen owning property abutting it but (if it be made an avenue) will willingly see that the same is improved opposite his property as the city may direct, at his own expense As to petitions I have to state that some of the citizens of the Second Ward petitioned the Council in regard to this park question more than four years ago that such petition has been repeated, and that we will even repeat it again starting it in the Post Office if Mr ' North Park will vouchsafe to explain to us the peculiar virtue of starting it in that precise locality The ex cathedra tone of the ' North Park" epistle plainly convinces me that I have succeeded in my attempt of calling the attention of the members of the City Council to the reasonable demands of the Second and Third Wards in regard to Park Row

WIDE AWAKE.

SECURE A HOME!!
THE RIVERSIDE
HOMESTEAD ASSOCIATION!
EAST PORTLAND, OREGON

I AM NOW PREPARED TO RECEIVE SUBSCRIPTIONS to the Stock

Applications for ONE HUNDRED SHARES was made ... books were opened and a large ... shares have been taken

The following extracts from the Oregonian and Bulletin will convey a good idea of the plan ... of the Association ... location of its land ...

RIVERSIDE HOMESTEAD ASSOCIATION

This association of whose organization we gave an account a few days since is now ready to dispose of shares As it is with one exception (the Portland Homestead Association) the pioneer organization of that kind in the city, it may be well enough to state what are its purposes and the manner in which it is proposed to conduct its operations The purposes of these Homestead Associations are not at all speculative in the ordinary sense of the word They are dependent for the profits of their investment upon the natural advance in the value of their lands consequent upon the co operation of many individuals —shareholders—and the advance on values of all surrounding lands by reason of the expansion of population and demand for room outside of but still near, the city The Riverside Homestead Association has a fraction over one hundred and twenty acres of land situated just south of Brooklyn on the east side of the river, the nearest boundary line being about one mile from the ferry landing at East Portland, The tract lies in one strip along the Wallamet river half a mile in length and another strip along the Oregon and California railroad half a mile in length the two strips being connected near the middle by two rows of blocks (with a street between them) the whole forming a figure not unlike the letter H It is divided into 74 blocks 200 feet square (with streets running at right angles) and 80 fractional lots along the river front The shares number 600, worth $60 per share It will be seen that a share thus represents nearly a lot with an undivided interest in the 80 fractional lots The 80 fractional shares are to be sold off at the proper time for the benefit of the Association shareholders coming in for the proceeds in proportion to the number of shares held When all shares are taken and the Association shall determine to do it the choice of lots and blocks will be put up at auction to the highest bidder the proceeds of such sales after deducting the original price of shares or lots, to be divided equally among the whole number of shares Thus if a person wants a particular lot or block and is willing to pay $100 or $300 premium (more or less as the case may be) he pays it and takes the lot or block as his individual property the premium being divided among the whole number of shareholders It will be seen therefore that everything is co operative and all interests mutual No man can make a dollar out of it without also making a dollar for every other equal shareholder There is no chance for loss unless the property by some chance should depreciate far below the first actual cost Whether this is liable to happen in the case of this particular tract of land must be judged by each for himself, but considering the steady and unprecedented advance on real estate in this city and neighborhood and at East Portland and vicinity for the last year or two it seems hardly possible for values to go back

In the Riverside Association all proper precautions seem to have been taken to guard against monopolies of shares No person is allowed to buy more than the number of shares representing three blocks, or twenty four lots and votes determining the operations of the Association are restricted in the same manner The buyers of shares may pay down $60 per share which will exempt them from all assessments or they may pay $15 quarterly with an assessment of $3 per share payable with the first installment being liable in this latter case to another (and only one other) assessment of $3 per share Upon the payment of the shares in full with the assessments as above the holder is entitled to his certificate and his proportion of all the profits accrued from all sources No officer of the Association receives any pay for services except the Secretary who gets $25 per month so it will be seen that the expenses must be light

That part of the tract lying along the river is a high plateau nearly level about 60 ... 0 feet above the water There is no part of the front row of blocks but commands a splendid view of Portland and the river for miles up and down stream That part of the tract lying along the railroad is every foot of it of the richest loam soil and adapted to gardening purposes A beautiful little stream of pure water runs through almost the entire length of this wing of the tract affording the means of irrigation and power sufficient to supply pure water to every part of the whole tract There is not a waste lot or fractional lot in the entire tract Under all these advantages, it would seem impossible that there should be any chance of loss to shareholders Within a year each shareholder if he choose may get a perfect title to as many lots as his shares may represent or he may continue his interest undivided with the Association while the organization may exist —Oregonian

THE RIVERSIDE HOMESTEAD ASSOCIATION

We have been led to make these remarks from the fact that the subject of making homes ... the outskirts of this city and East Portland ... being thoroughly discussed here among all classes and one homestead—the Riverside Just south of East Portland—has already been established The site selected is a tract of land lying a little over a mile south of the ferry landing It is shaped like the letter H one ... of which ... a half mile in length borders on the river ... on this portion of the ... forty or fifty feet above ... a ... view of ... ## Is the Rhine German or French?

[illegible] Becker [illegible] the [illegible] Rhine [illegible]

It never shall be France's
The free German Rhine
[illegible]
And to [illegible]

It never shall be France's
[illegible]
So long as [illegible]
His [illegible]

So long as [illegible]
The [illegible]
So long as [illegible]
The image [illegible]

So long as [illegible]
[illegible]
So long as [illegible]
[illegible]

It never shall be France's
The free, the German Rhine
[illegible]
[illegible]

In answer to the above, De Musset, a French poet, says:

Your German Rhine has been ours before
It has served as wassail bowl till [illegible]
Can singing its praise from door to door
Efface the hoofprints deep and fast
Of our cavalry charge that bathed its left bank in gore?

Your German Rhine has been marked [illegible]
In its breast the wound yet gapeth wide
Which conquering Condé made when he tore
Through its mantle of green to the farther side
Where once the sire has ridden shall the son not ride once more?

Your German Rhine has been ours before
If your annals would fain forget
Your daughters remember the days of yore
And wish the Frenchmen among them yet
For whom your vintage white they were always [illegible] to pour

If your German Rhine be yours once more
Then wash your liveries in its tide
But pitch your arrogance somewhat lower
Can ye recall with genuine pride
Your myriad raven beaks that drank the dying eagle's gore?

May your German Rhine flow evermore
In peace, and modestly may each spire
Be mirrored fair in its glassy floor
But, oh, keep down your bacchanal fire
Which, else, may rouse to life again the victor hearts of yore.

THE FUTURE OF FRANCE

Translation of the Last Chapter of the Late M. Prevost-Paradol's "La France Nouvelle"

Which is the result of the events of 1866 for France? Whereto do these events carry us? Is Prussia going to follow in peace her invading march throughout Germany, or shall we attempt to stop it, or at least encounter it, sword in hand? Which one of these alternatives must we choose?

Let us submit these two hypotheses to a rapid survey, and let us begin by that of a war between France and Prussia, whatever may have been the pretext or occasion of it. Will we be victorious over Prussia? The only fact that this matter leaves to question and doubt does not forbear to show us how striking have been the changes that our state of affairs have undergone of late years. Not long ago, when there were questions about the military power of the States of the Continent, the only question we propounded to ourselves was whether France would be able to affront a European coalition, but at present also, the question is whether France could resist the single power of Prussia, and furthermore, there is no one who does not feel the utmost respect for such a trial as fighting with her.

Be this as it may, we shall either be defeated or we shall win. Let us take up first the former, and by far the most pleasant hypothesis—that of victory. Suppose we get it. What would we do with it? The principle of the nationalities, which theoretically is the main feature of our politics, but of the benefit of which we do never avail ourselves, while leaving others to do it, as M. Thiers eloquently said. This principal calls for two conditions for making the annexation of a foreign country a legitimate affair, first the identity of race or of tongue, and secondly, the consent of the people thereof. Prussia, of course, overlooked the consent of the German sections of her new empire when she embodied them with it, and as for her retention of the Dukedoms of Posen and the two Danish Schleswig, she has altogether dispensed with identity and consent.

But suppose we are to imitate Prussia and apply to the principle of the nationalities, according to her own notions? Suppose that England shall not feel friendly on our attitude towards Belgium, and that we should drop away the consent of the last to incorporate it to France. Suppose furthermore that we should altogether disregard both the identity and the consent of the Rhenan provinces, or else that we (however great might be the blunder) should build up a State on the Rhine, which Germany would always claim to belong to her, and that it would be easy to keep it as an independent State, as to keep it for ourselves. In every one of these cases the use of the victory would be a most difficult task, for to apply the principle of the nationalities after the Prussian fashion is to speak plainly, to seize and keep important conquests in the sight of all Europe, and, on the other hand to apply it faithfully, that is, to want annexations under the only conditions of identity and consent, means for us to withdraw from the battle field with empty hands and, therefore to open the way to Prussia to her further aggrandizement in Germany as soon as she shall get over our first blow. The Frenchmen who, like their actual government, feel so much assured by this principle of the nationalities, seem to have never thought what they want is to throw the world in the arms of pillage, thus offering a reasonable pretext to the ambition of the stronger, and, on the other side, that if Europe should be reconstructed in consonance with this principle it is France that will inevitably be the greatest loser. Indeed, which are the two only points of the European continents to which we might apply to profit the principle of the nationalities, at least in the name of identity and with or without the consent of the populations re[illegible] in this wise, although this would be a striking derogation of this principle. It is Belgium and the French sections of Switzerland. But then in exchange for the expatriation of its small number of Europeans speaking the French tongue we should be obliged to allow, sooner or later, the union in a single State of 51,000,000 of German speaking people (not even including Alsace) and besides it the union of all Slavonic races under the Russian flag.

We are, therefore, obliged to confess that the principle of the nationalities, even when applied by us and turned to our own benefit, does not lessen the humiliation of France.

After all in case of success against Prussia it would seem necessary to throw aside this famous principle and [illegible] simply to the right of victor bounded as otherwise by the general [illegible] of the equilibrium. But in truth even so [illegible] the victory would not avail us [illegible] and [illegible] embarrassments for the principle of the nationalities which we have so long encouraged would continue to keep the world in trouble in spite of our [illegible], the movement of the German unity excited by the victory itself would follow on its way sooner or later, and this happy [illegible] would rather suspend than stop altogether the march of events. Be it however that this strife becomes inevitable on account of our blunders, it should bear us only the troubles of the victory. Victory may be unfaithful, and we must now consider the hypothesis of a defeat. Let us suppose for a moment that Prussia alone [illegible] should win it. We [illegible] to insist long in showing that it would be the tomb of French grandeur. It is [illegible] that France would be annihilated, for there are still in Europe a few nations [illegible] necessity of a certain equilibrium, and our humiliated condition would not seem acceptable to many powers, and if, on one side the jealousy [illegible] against ourselves should be fully [illegible] by our irreparable humiliation the jealousy of the winners among themselves [illegible] of the neutrals against our only winner would let us live [illegible] our own wreck although without strength or honor. It is even possible that Alsace and Lorraine would be taken from us at once, but what would be taken from us also, and with no hope of return. It would be our means of opposing such an encroachment in that [illegible] victorious rival should think it [illegible] and in consonance with its interests and the consent of that [illegible] will not be [illegible].

Some treaty limiting the number of our forces [illegible] of the army, and [illegible] the [illegible] the minimum indispensable for the maintenance of [illegible] and for the policy of our commerce, the [illegible] of our colonial empire, including Algeria, some mutilations of frontiers in favor of Prussia [illegible] gaining of more considerable losses, such would be the immediate result of our defeats, thus looking at things in their more favorable side. [illegible] Simultaneously with the [illegible] of France [illegible] described Prussia and [illegible] pendingly [illegible] German [illegible] by the power and the prestige of victorious Prussia would be [illegible] an accomplished fact. Austria treated once as another [illegible] or reserved for a later destruction (according to her behavior during the war) would [illegible] at any rate a secured [illegible] for the new Germany, and the Slavonic one for Russia, the Eastern question would be settled at once without our hearing from us, and England sufficiently paid for her complaisance by the peaceful possession of Egypt, would not like even counter these combinations of the new arbitrators of the Continent.

Before such a situation, drawn with rather soft than faithful hand, * * should we hesitate in throwing aside at least in this supreme hour all our internal [illegible] and in seeking victory or death under the national flag. And how could life be a prize to us if we were obliged henceforward to carry it on a half demolished debris covered yet by the pavilion of old France, but that could not float any more but at the will of all European [illegible].

It remains for us to examine the hypothesis of peace that is systematic and prolonged inactivity of France, while witnessing the continual aggrandizement of Prussia and the progress of German unity.

We do not need to dissimulate that this is the least probable hypothesis of all, for every chance indicates that war must burst out from the actual situation. It is not that the Prussian Government means to provoke it, nor that the French Government desires it; on the contrary, it is well known that by different reasons, the rulers of these two States are sincerely attached to peace, but in spite of the will of men the situation is for war. It is almost an impossibility that Prussia with all her prudence should not threaten once more to [illegible] Germany, and is it impossible that the French Government, with all their [illegible] should [illegible] Prussia go on without resisting it sword in hand?

But as events in the world very often baffle and fortune belies the best grounded provisions of human foresight, it is not absolutely impossible that peace should be maintained. We must, then, examine the hypothesis of peace—that is the probable consequences of a long continued inaction on the part of France. It is sad to think of it, but both reason and truth show to us very clearly that the result of a like inaction would be about the same as if France was thoroughly defeated, with the only difference that in the first case it would burst forth in a milder form and in not so short a length of time as in the last one. Be the union of Germany in a single State accomplished in the presence of French inaction or after a French defeat, that fact alone would be the declension beyond call of French grandeur. * * * It is said that this long-continued peace of France would check this (German) unity. No one can partake this opinion who considers the relative strength of Prussia and the rest of Germany that remains to be conquered by her, the always increasing prestige that would be lent her by the withdrawal of the French rivalry, and lastly, the seeds of death that Austria bears, and the increasing influence of Russia which hopes for the dissolution of the disgraced Empire. * * * * * What could we do then, with the fifty-one millions of united Germans? And, besides this, will we shut our eyes to the tremendous proportion in which the German population multiply themselves? * * Take old Prussia alone. From 1817 to 1864 her population increased eighty-two per cent.—from 10,536,000 to 19,190,000—while the French population only increased twenty-five per cent in the same period. What could we do, having at our very doors fifty-one millions of an enlightened, consecrated, disciplined people and fitted up with all the resources of modern science?

Why, it is often asked, why nourish such gloomy presages, and not believe that Germany, once united, will become a peaceful power, devoted only to industry, commerce and literature, with no intention of domineering in Europe, indifferent as to the acquisition of Holland, and by no means tempted to achieve the conquest of Denmark, and still less of re-conquering some day, the German provinces of France? * Why? Because this would be the first time in the world's history that we should see a great power stopped on its way of aggrandizement by a feeling of justice, in order to respect the feeble half-destroyed by its own hand to refrain from pushing on the conquests it began, and, after having displayed an ambition superior to its bearing, to yield to the fear of much ambition.

The Battle of Woerth

LONDON, August 16.—The New York Tribune's special correspondent, writing on Thursday from head-quarters of the Crown Prince, sends an account of the battle of Woerth. The swift and skillful movement against Wissembourg, resulting in complete success to our arms, was but a foretaste of the storm which threatened the northern part of Alsace. On the second day after Wissembourg came the battle of Woerth, and the Crown Prince gained a great victory over the ablest General in the French army. It is admitted the French fought with reckless courage, and that they inflicted heavy losses on their opponents, but the fact of his hard fighting and of this heavy loss, shows how serious a defeat was sustained by McMahon. I traversed the battle field while the dead still lay unburied on the trampled ground, and could form a good idea of how the fight had gone by the ghastly evidence which remained. Woerth is at the bottom of a fertile valley between two ridges of cultivated ground. There is a quantity of wooded land in the neighborhood, and [illegible] the French position, or on the western side of the valley. There is a strip of forest which forms a cover for retreating troops. The little river Bruden not big enough in summer time to float a skiff flows through the village, and a high road runs winding down toward the village on the eastern side of the valley, flanked by trees. Here were the Prussians stretching far to the right and left. Along this road were heaps of spiked helmets to be seen, and car loads of [illegible] under the trees. At a distance the French musketry fire had told more heavily than the Prussian, and I heard that the French artillery has been very well served, but though burying parties were busy with the German dead on the eastern side of Woerth, there was more than an exchange of the slaughterous work on the western side. Here the Prussians and Bavarians had pushed forward in strong force, and their fire had told fearfully on the French. The high spirit and rigid discipline of one army had been more than a match for the desperate resistance of the other. Whole companies of Frenchmen were mowed down in their wild attempts to check the enemy's advance. It has been a tolerably equal fight in some places. The ground was strewed with the German dead, but more Frenchmen had fallen in [illegible]. The [illegible] and the [illegible] Zouaves lay thick at many points, and the Cuirassiers had suffered much. Their [illegible] steel breastplates and brass helmets [illegible] thickly on the line of retreat, while dead horses in all directions might be counted by hundreds. And so westward through the woods went the evidences of increasing disaster. Officers and men were lying grandly where they had fallen, some of them in quiet shady spots, as though they were picnickers [illegible] and pools of blood where the wounded lay.

The proposed amendments to the Constitution of Michigan leave the question of paying the bonds already issued optional with the municipalities issuing them. A vote will be taken, in effect to legalize the debt, or revive it, if there is any claim to revive. As the Supreme Court has held that the original bonds were void, and many of the towns have secured their roads, it is just possible the majority, in certain localities, may conclude that it will be a poor investment to pay the dust.

Secretary Boutwell's Success

[illegible]

It is [illegible] the [illegible] they [illegible] Mr Boutwell [illegible] National [illegible] the administrative ability and [illegible] Mr B [illegible] Others again have blamed him for selling gold, affirming that it interfered with the transactions of private parties. Still others have said that [illegible] but with having inaugurated [illegible] an exhaustive process of reducing the principal of the public debt at the expense [illegible] ruinous [illegible] the country, well known that it is not Mr Boutwell but [illegible] that he could in no manner [illegible] of the [illegible] position. As custodian and manager of the public funds what would [illegible] do? Should he have allowed the money to accumulate in the Treasury, lying idle and useless and provoking stringency in the [illegible] money market [illegible] wiping out the National obligations, strengthening the National credit, discouraging speculative operations so ruinous to the [illegible] and saving large amounts in the shape of interest. Every rise in the value of our bonds represents so much bodily gained to the country. Since the present administration assumed the direction of affairs, our bonds have risen from 78 to 97 [illegible] an increase of 19 points. This has been the legitimate result of Mr Boutwell's management. In the same time the principal of our public debt has been reduced $156,148,563; that is to say, the nation owes that much less now than on the 4th of March, 1869, and consequently has gained over $14,000,000 in the shape of interest saved during the past eighteen months. The same system carried out at the same rate to the end of his administration will have reduced the public debt $414,360,171, which, at the rate of 6 per cent., will give an additional saving of nearly $25,000,000 in the shape of interest on the principal wiped out. If this is the exhaustive process complained of as reducing the principal of the debt at the expense of a ruinous drain upon the resources of the country, we must confess to a desire to have that process continued. The same journal is remarkably reticent as to the fact that the last Congress, by passing the Currency and Tariff bills, reduced taxation to the extent of nearly $80,000,000 per annum. It also suggests the following sagacious policy: "The correct policy would have been not to reduce the debt at the rate of $165,000,000 a year, as at present, but to reduce taxation to that extent." If the debt had not been reduced, instead of paying something like $116,000,000 interest, this year, we should have been obliged to pay $161,500,000, coupled with the agreeable knowledge that our bonds were not sought for, that our credit was not of the best, that the debt had not been decreased, and with no prospects that it ever could be so long as the non wiping out policy were followed. Such writers show a sad want of sound reflection. They utter peevish plaints and make utterly impracticable suggestions. They know that the debt was incurred to secure the integrity and preservation of the country, but having secured that end they now whine about its payment and strive to place it on the shoulders of the next generation, who will have as little inclination to assume its responsibility. When a private individual feels himself hampered with debt of his own incurring, which he can relieve himself of by paying stated installments, should he make such payments and get rid of the burden, or should he leave his obligations to be liquidated by his children? The country cannot prosper as it should so long as this terrible debt weighs upon it and bears down all interests. The best and only true policy is therefore, to get rid of it, and the sooner the better. It is better to suffer for a little while, especially when the cause of suffering is being so rapidly removed, than to forever groan and writhe under an insupportable load. The same patriotic motive which created the debt to save the country should now operate to remove the debt and relieve the country. This appears to be the guiding principle in Mr Boutwell's policy, and he is carrying it out with eminent ability and firmness. Each annual reduction of our obligations takes a load from the shoulders of the people, strengthens our credit, and renders it feasible to fund our debt at a reduced rate of interest.

President Grant

(From the Chicago Republican.)

The quiet, unostentatious way in which President Grant goes about his business, either public or private, is a deep grief to the Democratic heart. Accustomed to the arts and tricks of mere demagogues, who substitute noise and parade for merit, it is quite incomprehensible to them, that the highest officer in the Government should avoid every thing like display and go about among the people like a mere private citizen. His failure to put on extra airs, and indulge in foolish pomp, is set down as an evidence of lack of statesmanship, and a failure to appreciate what is expected of him, instead of being the highest proof of true American manhood, and a proper idea of his position as President of a Republic. If the people at large admire anything in their President more than his public career, it is that they see him shrink from noisy exhibitions, in which he would be made the central figure, and his quiet, orderly, and simple plain republican habits. There is no fuss and feathers in his composition. He is satisfied to discharge his public duties with an unselfish and devoted purpose to benefit every citizen alike. Mere politicians cannot understand that he has no selfish motives in what he is doing. Accustomed to deal with each other, and to probe each other's craft, plain blunt honesty is too much for them. They have read of such persons in their school books, but set it down as a mere myth. To be brought in contact and actually have to deal with such real straightforward honesty immeasurably puzzles them.

A PHYSICIAN ON THE STAND.—The standard legal dictionaries in use may be searched in vain for more accurate definition of terms than those recently given by a physician in Pulaski, Tenn., as reported to us by a leading member of the bar in that place. Mr B and Mr L, opposing counsel in a pending case, were engaged in taking depositions to be used on the trial of the cause. The question as to a certain woman's soundness of mind being in controversy, a physician was called as a medical expert, and during his examination the following dialogue took place:

Question. Do you think this lady is of sound mind?

Answer. No, sir, I do not.

Q. Does she know the difference between a power of attorney and an absolute conveyance?

A. No, sir, of course she don't, and there are very few women who do.

Q. Do you know the difference?

A. Yes, sir, of course I do; do you suppose I am an ignoramus?

Q. Well, sir, will you be kind enough to tell us the difference?

A. Well—well, a power of attorney is the strength of mind of any particular lawyer, and an absolute conveyance is a hack, or omnibus, or railroad car, or something of the sort.—[illegible]

Gotlieb Wagner, a Prussian, arrived in New York a few days ago on the German steamer [illegible]. He heard of the recent victories in fatherland, drank success to fatherland by treating battalion after battalion of thirsty countrymen. Drank success to fatherland in a sauerkraut saloon, corner of Fourth and [illegible] street, [illegible] and paid $1 [illegible] for fatherland. He paid liberally, and paid $4 [illegible] Cottage [illegible] for fatherland, [illegible] $100 for fatherland. He now wakes the [illegible] police to arrest the men who drank up $100 of his money for fatherland.

A Prussian report from St. Avold asserts that the French have lost so far no fewer than [illegible] prisoners—equivalent to two full corps—to say nothing of the killed and wounded. This of course is a preposterous exaggeration. It is a curious fact that since the defeat of McMahon threw Paris into such disorder, that defeat, if Prussian stories are to be trusted, has grown bigger and bigger every day. But then to match this we have the Paris report that for every Frenchman killed in the recent battles five Prussians have been made to bite the dust.

Having examined the New Patent Shaft Coupling, invented by H. R. Hoagland, we feel pleasure in [illegible] ing the public that in our opinion it is the safest and best [illegible] of connecting shafts or tongues to all vehicles that has ever been used.
